The pottery factory

It is located to the west of the town of Anabta, with an area of 30 dunums which is located in area (A).It is a slightly elevated area on the main road that connects Tulkarm - Nablus, and it is a medium-sized ruin. It represents a group of historical periods, especially the Roman, the Byzantine, and the Islamicperiods.Only some foundations extend along the outskirts of the ruin, in addition to several stoney sections, surrounded by a wall on a hill, caves, cisterns, and burials.It overlooks the commercial road between Egypt and the Levant (Darb Al-Sultana).The site is about 270 meters above sea level, and the top area of the site is about 25 dunums. In previous surveys conducted in the area, it was mentioned that the ruin includes buildings, and some existing walls, in addition to pottery pieces dating back to separate eras, including the second middle Bronze Age, the Iron Age, the Persian period, the Hellenistic period, and the early Roman period.
