Khirbet Samara

The ruin is located northwest of the village of Sfareen, and southeast of the village of Kafr al-Labad.Its area is about 30 dunums. It includes various archaeological remains, indicating the succession of multiple civilizations on the same site, the most important of these Roman and Byzantine civilizations, and among the visible monuments that can be seen is a basilica building that resembles the layout of churches dating back to the Byzantine period. The building is surrounded by beautiful and colorful mosaic paving that resembles decoration and drawings of grape leaves and geometric shapes, with a 5 meters tower and gate built of large stones. A group of basements, caves, large stone foundations, and many wells were found in the ruin and its surroundings, alongside a group of tombs located north, some of which are carefully cut from the rock.
